Rooted in the long legacy of liberatory education, Chicago Freedom School (CFS) creates new generations of critical thinkers who use their unique experiences and power to create a just world.

Founded in 2007, CFS builds intergenerational partnerships and facilitates programming for young people of color while offering training to individuals and organizations committed to movement building. Inspired by the Mississippi Freedom Schools of the Civil Rights Era, CFS takes an innovative approach to youth activism and leadership development through social justice and movement history education, community organizing, healing justice, and transformative justice.
Chicago Freedom School believes in the power of young people.

Our programs equip young people and adult allies with the tools to develop actionable strategies for social change. Young people are at the center of organizational and programmatic decision-making as program designers, curriculum writers, and evaluators. Beyond the programs below, our Youth Leadership Board is a key governing body with a central role in organizational decision-making, staff hiring, and strategic planning.

PROGRAMS INCLUDE:

Freedom Fellowship is a 6-month intensive social justice leadership program for BIPOC youth ages 14-17 that explores social movement history, systems of oppression and liberation, community organizing, and youth-led action.

Project HealUs explores the history of the reproductive justice movement through intersectional lenses, examining the social and political ways that we engage our bodies, ourselves, and each other.

Northstar Liberation Education Collective focuses on healing justice and trauma-informed practice, with a vision to support young folks to become trainers and facilitators of healing-centered youth development.

Training and Capacity Building on topics such as racial justice, trauma-informed healing practices understanding adultism and more.
Chicago Freedom School supports young people to take action for justice in their personal lives and communities. Our Youth Organizers partner with youth leaders across the city to address some of the most pressing issues facing Black and Brown communities. We support young people to lead action through relationship-building, skill development, and healing and wellness practices.

Core coalition member for #CopsOutCPS which seeks to remove all police from Chicago Public Schools. As of July 2021, over 30 high schools voted to remove one or both police officer positions from their budgets.

Core coalition member of the Final Five campaign, which seeks to close the remaining 5 youth prisons in Illinois.

Host political education and community organizing skills workshops for hundreds of youth organizers throughout the year to build community and strategy for youth-led organizing.
HOLISTIC CARE & SUPPORT

CYMA is a partnership between Chicago Freedom School, Youth Empowerment Performance Project, Assata’s Daughters, Circles and Ciphers and Street Youth Rise Up that provides food, grocery cards, PPE, cleaning supplies, toiletries, and cash assistance to young organizers in need. Since May 2020, CYMA has served 500 unduplicated young people and their families by offering resource advocacy and has provided 3,000 different items through the CYMA Store.

HEALING CENTERS DURING PROTESTS
CFS continues to open its doors to young organizers during downtown protests to provide food, PPE, and a safe space to emotionally process.

MENTAL HEALTH SUPPORT
Police harassment and the relentlessness of the COVID-19 pandemic has caused many CFS youth to experience increased anxiety, grief, isolation, health concerns, and economic insecurity. CFS partnered with networks of qualified, culturally conscious Black and Brown mental health therapists to provide free, one-on-one therapy sessions to support mental wellbeing and healing.

CHICAGO FREEDOM SCHOOL OFFERS HOLISTIC CARE TO OUR YOUTH ORGANIZERS
CHICAGO FREEDOM SCHOOL: WE’RE AN IDEA AND A PRACTICE.

When the Girls Best Friend Foundation gathered grantees together in January 2004 to ask what resources could be made available to support citywide youth activism, Mariame Kaba came ready with a one-pager on “Freedom Schools.” After 2 years, with the support of dozens of intergenerational organizers from across the city, we brought CFS to life!

CFS was first envisioned as an intensive, youth-driven summer program focused on providing Black and Brown youth of all walks of life with experiences and tools that would enable them to discover the leader and organizer within. The vision was to create models of bottom-up organizing that didn’t look at youth as tokens or manipulate young people’s strategy and thought, but instead built partnerships where youth can be at the table or even break down the table!

Since we opened our doors in 2007, CFS has been a political home for thousands of youth and adult comrades who are drawn to CFS because they can bring their full selves to our programs as we work collectively to raise consciousness, cultivate healing, and fight for liberation. Young people stay because we build community and a social justice orientation, rooted in Black history and Black liberation, that extends beyond any particular campaign to be sustained through their lifetimes.

Our work is an idea, and it is also a practice. The practice of building community. Building space to imagine an abolitionist future. Building skills. Building healing. Building coalitions for change.

City cites Chicago Freedom School after they provided meals to protesters in Loop

In the summer of 1964, long before the teenagers gathered at Jones College Prep were born, the Mississippi freedom schools taught a generation of youth how to change America.

Now the Chicago Freedom School, based on the non-traditional Southern schools that taught students how to battle segregation, hopes to spark similar activism among young people who don’t remember police dogs, fire hoses and “colored only” water fountains.
